Buchanan's Inaugural Address but little idea of its tone and spirit. One remark in that version is a total misrepresentafrom the opposition. The treatment of the slaoffice and spoils. The slavery agitation, it is avail. very properly said, " has produced no positive good to any human being." The worl! will decide upon whom rests the charge of agitating the slavery question. Those who acquired Louis and didn't acitate the slavery question. they resisted the agitation; those who admitted tate the slavery question, they resisted; those wife ought to have a divorce. who acquired California and New Mexico, and pased the Compromise measures of 1850, didn't ag tate the slavery question, they resisted it; those who passed the Nebraska-Kansas bill an . repealed the Missouri Compromise, didn't agitate the slavery question. The Democracy are the authors of all these great measures, and time has vindicated them; but they have, at every step, encountered the shricking and croaking o. factions, who have seized upon the slavery hobby, and rode it whip and spur, until it broke down. The President notices briefly the reckles manner of undervaluing the Union; the dangers of corruption in the government, the profigate squandering away of the public lands, the Pacific Rulroad, and our foreign relations. The whole tone of the message is moderate, firm, and patriotic, and will commend itself to reflecting men of all parties. The American party may, perhaps, think themselves neglected, for a nutice of their creed and exploits can only be so newait mortifying to occupy so small a space, but they are given quite as much consequence as any importial court would assign to them We shall look with some curiosity to see what points of this neat, compact, and statesman-like address the factions will select in order to bestow upon the performance the usual amount of vi very in 1 gnant; but when they read the decision per ite, and perhaps han lover this God-forsaken of the bill. We insist that the editor shall confess fully that he has, in times past, libelled grossly the character of General Pilcher; that what we said of him was true, and what the Journal said was false. To be sure, the editor may say that this confession is implied in what he now says; but that is a very shabby and I anticipate with confidence your forbearway of getting along. WE RESPECTFULLY CALL THE attention of our friends, and more especially country merchants and first dealers, to our large and well-assort of sto k of Fall and Winner BRY GOODS.

Having ample mrangements with ireporters and anamatemers, we feel assured we can ofter inducements to buyers in this market which we think caused fail in searring their patronage.

We take pleasure at all times in showing our goods, and would ask a careful examination of our slock and prices before purchasing elsewhere.
